

Caitlin Slomp

Caitlin is a certified genetic counsellor and Clinical Assistant Professor at the University of British Columbia (UBC). She completed her BSc in molecular genetics at the University of Alberta in 2014, and her MSc in genetic counselling at UBC in 2016. She works with the Translational Psychiatric Genetics Group in Vancouver, conducting qualitative and quantitative research related to psychiatric risk factors, psychiatric genetic counselling outcomes, and the provision of personalized medicine to patients in BC.